Instructions

You will need... 1 yard of fleece fabric, scissors, and half an hour

--Cut the fabric in half so that you have two same size rectangles.

--Place the rectangles together so the "nice" sides of the fabric are facing out (and the "ugly" sides are touching) and that the rectangles match. (If they do not completely match that is fine.)

--All around all four sides make cuts with scissors that are about 3 inches only and 1 to 1 ½ inch wide - kind of like making fringe.

--You will cut through both pieces of fabric at the same time making the same cuts in both.

--Then, take a piece of fringe from the top and tie a knot with the bottom piece - connecting the two pieces together and leaving the edges hanging.

--Do this all the way around.

--The corners are tricky and you can just tie every other one if that is easier.

--The result should be one blanket with knotted fringe all the way around with the pretty sides showing.
