Step 1

Complete due diligence application

Step 2

Complete self-certification

Step 3

Post your project

Step 4

Access the Apple Matching Gifts Program

GlobalGiving and Benevity work together to determine your eligibility for the Apple Matching Gifts Program. Here is how it works:

Step 1 | Complete GlobalGiving's due diligence application

You are encouraged to submit GlobalGiving's due diligence application within 21 days of receiving an invitation. The application requires submission of a number of critical documents, including:

- Certificate of government registration
- Founding document with dissolution clause
- Program materials (e.g., annual report, brochure, newsletter)
- Names of senior staff and board members
- Two years of financial statements and a projected annual budget

In addition, you must provide disbursement (banking) information and sign GlobalGiving's terms and conditions.

Step 2 | Complete Apple's self-certification with Benevity

You will be asked to complete the Apple self-certification for eligibility on Benevity's Charity Portal.

Step 3 | Post a project to GlobalGiving

If your application and self-certification are approved you will then post a project reflecting one of your programs on the GlobalGiving website. This information will then be made available to Apple employees through Benevity.

Step 4 | Access Apple's Matching Gifts Program and remain an active GlobalGiving partner

Donations by employees will be made on the Benevity Charity Portal and then disbursed (with Apple matching funds if applicable) by GlobalGiving on a monthly basis. Disbursement information will be available to the organization via GlobalGiving.org. To remain an active GlobalGiving partner, organizations are required to report on their projects quarterly and renew their application every two years.

Questions related to the self-certification and Benevity's Charity Portal can be directed to Benevity at causes@benevity.org.
Questions related to due diligence and project posting can be directed to GlobalGiving at apple@globalgiving.org.
