

A photograph of a classroom scene with a blue color overlay. A teacher, seen from the side and back, is holding a small, dark object up in the air with her right hand. She is wearing a white shirt and a lanyard that says 'VISITOR'. A group of five young children are sitting on the floor, looking up at the object. One child is wearing a Captain America t-shirt. The background shows classroom furniture, including a desk with a printer and storage bins. The text 'Many schools are adopting mindfulness because children become more responsive and less reactive, more focused and less distracted, and more calm and less stressed. It can also create a more positive learning environment where kids are primed to pay attention.' is overlaid in white at the top. The text 'GARRISON INSTITUTE' is overlaid in white below the paragraph. The ResilientKids logo is in the bottom left corner.

Many schools are adopting mindfulness because children become more responsive and less reactive, more focused and less distracted, and more calm and less stressed. It can also create a more positive learning environment where kids are primed to pay attention.

GARRISON INSTITUTE