Projected Makuach School

Chiefs and Elders Marked the School's Building Site. Why Makuach Village?

After spending 25 years away from home, Dr. Diing had four consecutive trips to his village. During his trips, children and parents had constantly asked him to assist them with a building a school in their village. Dr. Diing himself had witnessed several severe conditions as stated below;

- Children walk a long distance to search for a school.
- Wild animals attack children on their ways to schools and homes.
- Bad weather such as rainfalls and wind break the trees branches and fall on children and teachers in the under tree schools. Injuries and death cases had occurred.
- Girls are not allowed to go to school due to long distance walks.

Given the above conditions and in pursuance of our mission and objectives, Dr. Diing and his American friends set up Makuach School Project in a respond to the urgent need of school and education in his native village of Makuach in South Sudan, the African newest nation.
