ABOUT US:

In 2001, Anthony Nuncio and his dog Behr were hiking when Behr accidentally fell off a cliff. He immediately dialed 911 and to his disappointment, was told that a response unit could not rescue his pet. Although Behr survived his injuries, Anthony made it his mission to establish an emergency response service for animals in crisis. Understanding that medical treatment for animals has its financial burdens, Anthony knew there had to be an alternative. With this in mind he has worked hard in establishing Pet-A-Medic, an emergency ambulance service at no cost, so that every animal would have a fighting chance.

WHO ARE WE:

Pet-A-Medic is a free emergency ambulance service for pets and strays, responding only to life threatening situations.

Currently, no free service exists for those who cannot afford established services. We are a team of volunteers with great passion for our cause.

We use our time, expertise and vehicles to aid and protect any animal in need of emergency medical assistance. We need your help to provide this service to more communities of Los Angeles county and to expand even further in the future. With your support, we are able to help the voiceless.

Pet-A-Medic relies solely on private donations and the assistance of our great team of volunteers.

HOW IT WORKS:

1. Individuals and pet owners may call the Pet-A-Medic emergency help line 24-hours a day.
2. Our personnel is trained to provide the caller with the best information possible to assist the pet owner in their effort to stabilize the animal's condition.
3. In the event the situation is more critical, then our help line will dispatch one of our units to safely transport the animal to an emergency veterinarian clinic.
