

Child marriage, rape and an unwanted pregnancy can disempower and rob a young girl's chance out of poverty.

Child Marriage and teenage pregnancy often results in girls dropping out of school to become mothers.

And I tell you this is the future for more than 40% teenage women in Nigeria. It is estimated that 47% of Nigerian women are mothers before they reach 20. Meaning they didn't finish high school!

Laws have been put in place to end child marriage and protect the human rights of women and girls, but girls continue to be cut, raped and coerced into early child marriage. Every day more than 10% of Nigerian girls are dropping out of school due to rape, teenage pregnancy and child and early forced marriage .

Who We are

African Girls Empowerment Network is a registered Non-Profit organization that championed the cause of vulnerable and economically disadvantaged young women and girls in Africa.

We are working to advance gender equality in girls' education, end child marriage and empower rape survivors, teenage mothers and victims of female genital mutilation.

Our Brief History

African Girls Empowerment Network was established in October 2015 as community based group with the primary focus to end child marriage and break barriers to girls' education.

In September 8, 2016, the Company registered with Corporate Affairs Commission Nigeria and attained a status of 501(c)(3) non-profit organization.

"Investing in girls' education is the very best thing we can do, not just for our daughters and granddaughters, but for their families, their communities, and their countries."

-Michelle Obama
