

YTD Third Quarter Highlights - 2019

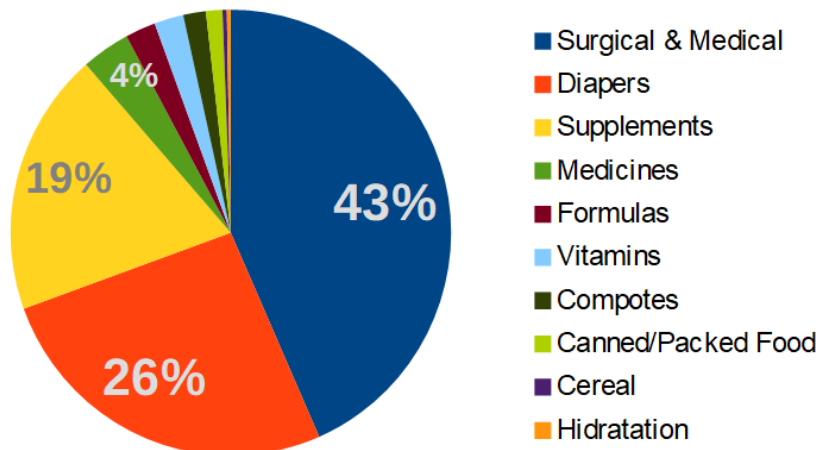

In our previous report from 1st Semester, we highlighted the great support we had from so many individual donors, media, companies, and other organizations that allowed us to build good inventory levels, and as consequence, ensure large monthly shipments of several in-kind donations and items we were able to buy with individual monetary donations and grants.

Today, we can still see the impact of such a strong start of the year. Our work on operations, inventory management and constant communication with our teams in Venezuela also paid off and we have been able to respond to most critical categories. Of course, the crisis and needs still surpasses our resources and it remains a major challenge, for instance, to raise funds for very specialized, expensive items under Surgical & Medical Equipment that could not be accesible unless we have large monetary donations or grants.

Unfortunately, in general, it is still not enough no matter what we do, because Venezuela is still sbmerged in a “complex humanitarian emergency” as defined by United Nations.

Same way, our ALIMENTANDO FUTUROS’ meal program and budget has been challenged by inflation of 1,800,000% (projected to 10,000,000% for 2019) and currency devaluation of 45%. This has put at risk the opening of more meal programs and our existing ones, providing today 1,810 students and teachers with a daily meal as an incentive for attending school, for education, for a better future.

Here is a summary of the shipments and supplies received in Venezuela until end of Sept (in Volume):
