

JOY BARASA'S PLEA FOR EDUCATION

Name: Joy Barasa

Age: 15years

Level of Education: Third Year Secondary School

Joy resides in Kangemi a determined soul named Joy Barasa, a 15-year-old girl whose dreams are currently at a crossroads due to significant challenges in accessing education. Her story is one of resilience, courage, and a deep-seated desire to break free from the chains of adversity.

Joy, along with her five siblings, found themselves thrust into the responsibilities of independent living when their mother had to relocate to the Gulf countries to work as a house manager. This decision, born out of necessity, was a response to the neglect they experienced from their father. Sadly, due to unforeseen health issues, Joy's mother had to return to Kenya, where her health struggles have become a barrier even to providing the basic necessities for the family.

In the midst of daily struggles to put food on the table, Joy faces a unique set of challenges that extend beyond mere survival. The guidance and financial strain have made accessing education a daunting task for Joy and her siblings. However, Joy, undeterred by the adversities, is a dedicated student currently in her third year of secondary education.

Joy recognizes the transformative power of education in breaking the cycle of poverty. Her dreams extend beyond personal success; she aspires to use education as a means to uplift her living standards and those of her family. Unfortunately, the weight of the financial burden is becoming overwhelming, and she stands at the precipice of discontinuing her education.

The estimated cost for Joy's education, covering tuition, books, and other essential expenses, is approximately $600. In the face of these challenges, we turn to your generosity and compassion to make a profound impact on Joy's life. Your support can provide her with the opportunity to continue her education and, in turn, empower her to reshape the trajectory of her life.
