Central African Republic Children's Lives

Central African Republic, the sixth most vulnerable country, has long-term political instability, poor regulated, and underdeveloped. The conflicts with neighbors and frequent civil wars, leads to the whole country suffers from violence and war.

Angela, 15 years old, and her best friend, Innes, grow up in the same village. When the rebels attacked their hometown in the middle of the night, they and their mothers escaped. They didn't bring anything except their clothes.

They can't remember how long it took to reach the camps for internally displaced people. Everything is very chaotic for the first few months. Angela and Innes try their best to adjust their lives, but the hardest part is they live without goals and hopes every day, just an endless waiting.

The girls are eager for change, the end of the war, and the opportunity to get an education. This lets them feel they are not wasting their lives. "Because I can't go to school and study, so I feel I don't have hope in the future," Angela said helplessly.
