PLANT-BASED MEALS FOR INDIGENOUS YOUTH

This has been a very different year from the rest, not just with Bright Side Projects heralding in our 12th year of operation but also we have been spending more time setting up the framework for new programs, and encountering various trials and tribulations as we grow up with our youth.

For indigenous communities, we were able to create and share with them 48 spanning plant-based meals over Selecting to work once again with SUIIS, we were able to deliver 30 kg of Vegan Heaven's organic rice, 121 portions of plant-based food staples to 10 households in Taitung. Kicking off the year with this trip started us on the path for the first half of th year, obtaining the means to restart a community center that we assisted in getting funded several years ago. We have been a part of this indigenous community since 2015 and hope that the children here can continue to have access to education and meals which had fortunately, stopped in the past 3-4 years.

After the center was built with networking resources we had assisted in providing, the newly built center that has since been left empty and non working for three years. With some obstacles pending we are confident that by September by the new school year, we can at least start activities in the and then continue to grow it from there.

During the first half of the year we also headed down south to Tainan and the mountainous indigenous villages in Pingtung, stopping by potential future partners for Bright Side Projects programs. We hope that we can continue to give back more to communities and strengthen these relationships for the future of the youth.

We want to thank everyone for their support!
