Educational CRISIS

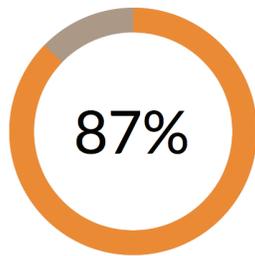

Understanding the problem

Check out some data on reading habits in Brazil (Instituto Pró-Livro and IBOPE):

of the students don't read on a regular basis of the students have never been given a book

Only 1 in 4 Brazilians is fully literate: reading, writing and math.

The History

Billions of people are enjoying way better standards of living nowadays compared to the generations that lived only 50 to 100 years ago. The progress most nations have achieved in the last couple of centuries is unprecedented.

This huge improvement on the standards of living of humanity can be correlated to gains in productivity and to its direct results: more and cheaper means of production (machines, equipment, tools), leading to a variety of products for every taste and pocket, allowing people to enjoy more time, leisure and comfort.

One of the main reasons for this impressive progress is knowledge. More knowledge leads to innovation and to the creation of wealth.

The bad news

Unfortunately, the world is experiencing in the last decades a halt and even a step back in one of the most important sources of knowledge: education.

When compared to its own educational data, most countries' education systems are failing. Each new evaluation result is worse than the previous one.

Brazil is one of the bad examples. Each year the public school system spends more money and gets worse results. That's a huge crisis! One of these crises that can put a whole country down the ladder.

The good news!

Holistica Foundation Inc. is a nonprofit organization dedicated to alleviating social and economic differences by helping the current generation of poor students to become wealthier compared to their parents.

The way we do it is by stimulating the healthy habit of everyday reading. We believe that when one loves to read, one's perspectives in life become more clear and thus, attainable.

The tool we use to accomplish this goal is 1BOOK4LIFE: a Social Educational Program focused on literacy. By gifting brand new literature books (books full of adventures, fun, and amusement) to each and every student attending the selected public school, the Program connects them to a world where learning is fun, changing their lives forever.
