

THE INCLUSIVITY COLLECTIVE

“STRUGGLING FOR EQUALITY”

I don't feel too well today.

I haven't been able to shower for ~~two~~³ days now.

I haven't left my room in a week.

the last time I took some pictures.

Two months have gone by and I can't remember

I need to send the email. I need to send that email.

"I think I need help..."

In the consultation room she asks me about my background. Brown drapes, flower pot and a glass of water on sight. I speak:

People can't know, they'll call me crazy.

She makes a diagnosis.

I am a black womxn living with mental illness.

I wish for those ahead of me what those before me were deprived of:

Free, accessible, stigma-free, prioritized and supportive mental health care.

Look at it...

No seriously, look at it

Look at the way it folds

The African flag.

Look at it!

The African flag that waves up high

Look at it

The flag with - no borders.

no discrimination.

no nationality.

Africa -

A place called home.

A place where everyone is greeted with -

"welcome",

"welkom",

"kwakaribisha",

Look at it!

A flag that represents

all Africans

A flag that represents

US.

In November 2012 when I was doing Grade 9, I was shot at by police-vans accused of throwing stones at Cape Farmworker's Protest.

The police showed no mercy for innocent bystanders whether they were children or even pregnant women. The violence was widespread & many incidents were not documented. The perpetuation of violence in the context of "democratic South Africa" can be traced historically. Important to note is the implication of this culture in 'townships' where this

Three years later in University of Cape town the protests had transformed into issues of Outsourcing of university workers, residence accommodation and decolonization. Unsurprisingly, I found myself in the midst of these, I had not received accommodation in UCT. I had to travel from Ceres (more than 60km away) to attend school every day. I witnessed the same violence even in a university space. We were being shot at with rubber bullets and the university hired private security and other tactics (i.e private investigation) to perpetuate the violence

OVERCOMING TRAUMA (It's not your fault)

Life can get complicated, we are all vastly different - yet we are all human, and as humans we all have rights, right????

My life has been complicated, and I didn't think I deserved help. I believed where I was, was my fault.

Being differently abled, I became vulnerable to sexual abuse and assault - I needed help. The most helpful words spoken to me while I was at my lowest was "It's not your fault".

Once I learnt to forgive my body, I was able to unpack memories and feelings that had disabled me.

The flashbacks became less and less... I saved myself from an intensely abusive relationship and began to love myself for the first time.

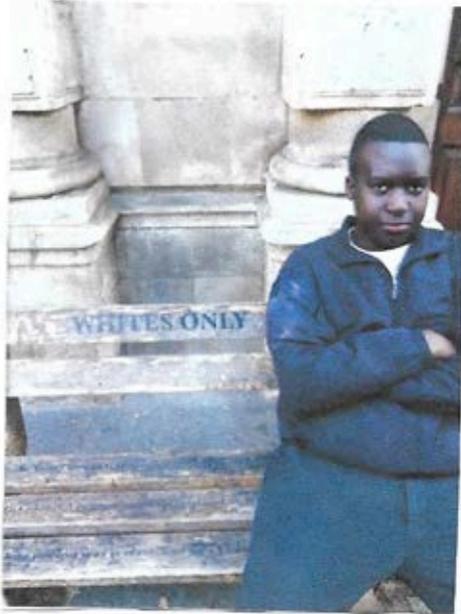

AMANDA

If you feel stuck, know there is a way out. You are loved. You are worthy. You deserve happiness. You deserve peace, and most importantly - IT'S NOT YOUR FAULT!

THE FOREIGNER

We live in a city where discrimination and racism exists. A man by the name of Joseph had to go through this with his family.

Town in search of a better life. But while being here, it got worse. He got racially discriminated by the other people. Wherever he went he would be hated on because of the colour of his skin.

He came to Cape

He is now solely fixed on changing people's ideas on foreigners and he does not want his children to go through what he experienced.

get a job, and even when he gets one, he does not enjoy it. The people made him feel as if he didn't belong there, and they excluded him from everything, but he kept on going, to provide for his family.

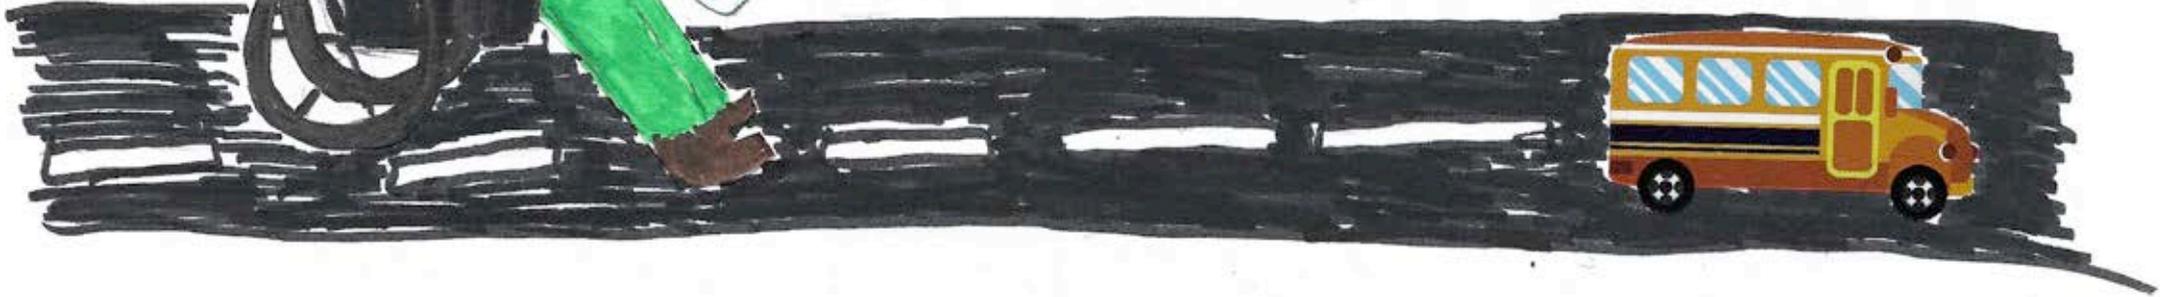

It was even hard for him

The world, my world's, a-part of me apart from me; taken.
From me is a mosaic less of colour,
no lines detected,
a fight projected.

An ode to mental health.

I feel nothing as though I am.
Nothing.
A vessel through a vacuum where there exists no thing.

I am a black womxn living with mental illness.

I wish for those ahead of me what those before me were deprived of:

Free, accessible, stigma-free, prioritized and supportive mental health care.

I know my other is there;
Here:
I need it for this world's burden's bear.

Where are your feelings?

Please respect me.
I am not beneath
you. Meet my eyes when you speak to me.

I exist. I am here,
and I am valid.

SYDNEY ADAMS

If you listen
If you REALLY listen.

You will hear our ancient cry, centuries old.

Our voices are now cracked and sore. Our throats are raw.

We have swallowed dust.

We are tired. We are so tired.

WE THOUGHT WE WERE NOT SCREAMING LOUD ENOUGH.

But We have been screaming at deaf ears. Deaf by choice.

Death by choice.

Our death.

Our blood.

On your hands.

SYDNEY ADAMS

Who is she?

she is a catcall in the street that makes her sick to her stomach

she is the shame that she tries to wash away that no amount of soap can erase she is vodka tipped neat as she tries to forget what happened on her sheets.

She is not a piece of meat.
Her "pussy" and "ass" and "bits" belong to a heart and a mind and a soul song

that you do not even bother to learn the lyrics to.

Before you take what does not belong to you.

She is the beginning of everything.

She is the fluid in your spine and the tendons in your thighs.

Her amniotic fluid was your first baptism.

Her womb was where your heartbeat found its rhythm.

There is a reason they call it Mother Earth.

There is nothing on this planet that holds more worth than the bodies that birth you.

You call him a pussy because to be anything female is wrong.

Why the fuck is that an insult?
When it's exactly where you came from?

We are the daughters of decades of fighting against violence

We are the remnants of the voices that they tried to silence

We are the echoes of cries that we have not let die yet.

But we survived it.
We take what we are feeling and make cracks in that fucking glass ceiling.

Our patience is leaving.

The world has lost our trust but to us it owes so much.

Enough is enough.
