

More Than a Mission Trip

Grace Honduras
Building dreams, recycling lives

We were blessed to receive 20 angels to Grace Honduras, who brought new hope, love and the good news of Jesus Christ to the trash dump community.

What It Meant to the Children

They felt seen

"Albert is now my friend; we didn't even work in the trash dump through all that week, so we would be playing soccer all day."

*"I loved dancing with Lydia"
"Gigi is a fun teacher, can we hire her?"*

"I felt that God was making up for my broken childhood and I got to be a happy little girl for once."

"When are they coming back? Are they coming back on Monday?" "When are they coming back? I want my mom and dad to talk to them" "When they come back?, can they bring their children, so we can play with them."

Little Mario will surely remember the bike ride with Mark.

They experienced joy and childhood

"Thursday was the best day of my life." - This sentence was repeated by every child who I asked about last week.
*"I've never been to a party like that before."
"I loved watching the World Cup in school with my friends."*

For one week, Grace Honduras was filled with new faces, helping hands, laughter, prayer, construction, medical care, Bible lessons, and moments of genuine connection.

For our children, this mission trip meant much more than receiving activities or material support. It meant being noticed, listened to, played with, prayed for, and loved intentionally.

For our staff, it offered an opportunity to witness a different expression of teamwork, service, generosity, and shared responsibility.

For me personally, it was a dream come true, to be able to witness what God's purpose for Grace Honduras has always been.

They received care

Mothers spoke about being grateful for the doctors, the medicine, and the attention they received. Also felt deeply grateful for the house visits.

They encountered faith through relationship

The children did not only hear that God sees them. They experienced that message through adults who traveled thousands of miles to know them, serve them, and spend time with them.

"I liked the Bibles classes, they were fun and different as our usual classe."

Mothers have contacted us to offer volunteer work in new projects we have. I have also received messages from new people asking for enrollment in Grace school. And other little girls from the community have come to ask to play in the playground on the weekends.
