

Youth Activism on the TPNW

Overview

We are dedicated to changing the narrative on how nuclear weapons are discussed in universities and encouraging students to become nuclear disarmament activists.

Currently, we plan to bring a group of students from New York and Massachusetts to ICAN France and ICAN's Campaign Forum in Paris, France from February 14-15, 2020.

We are also planning to convene a youth-led orientation on February 13, 2020. The Nuclear Age Peace Foundation (NAPF)'s New York team will plan the curriculum and orientation with input from our partners for this project.

The NAPF New York team consists of Mr. Christian N. Ciobanu, NAPF's New York and Youth Representative; Ms. Mariana Casellato, a young educator who is studying peace and human rights education at Columbia's Teachers College; Mr. Alei Rizvi, an intern who is studying at New York University; and Ms. Susan Chapas, another intern who is studying at Fordham University.

Follow-up Activities

Upon returning to the US, the students will be expected to organize at least one campus event, lobby delegates to support the TPNW, and attend the 2020 NPT Review Conference. We also intend to organize a side event at the NPT Review Conference to highlight youth activism and humanitarian-based education.

Partners

The partners are the Treaty Awareness Campaign and Peace Action New York State.

Budget

Below is a table outlining the prices for students and for coordinators. In addition to the prices listed below, there will be a project management fee, which is 10% of the total budget. We are seeking partial funding from foundations, as the majority of the students will be seeking financial support from their universities and through online crowd funding. We are also seeking partial funding for the coordinators.
