

Johnson Kibok divorced his wife in 2007. This puts Ms. Alai and her 4 children in severe economic hardship. Sudan has no social system which provides for divorced woman and their children.

Mr. Kibok left his ex-wife and 4 children in severe economic hardship since he was the main earner in the family. His ex-wife has no education, jobless, and as a divorced woman in Sudan she is not accepted by the society. She receives no child support, and cannot provide for their basic needs. Please support this family generously. Hope Ofiriha helps in paying for their living, medical, and educational expenses. Ms. Alai resides at Omdurman with her children.

Hope Ofiriha pays school fees for children, basic living expenses, clothes, and medical expenses.

By helping this family with their living expenses and children's education, we can help them through the difficult time they are in, and give them a better chance to recover and become independent to help themselves.

They need only $150 per month for house rent, and basic living costs.

Appreciation for your kind support!
