DEAR FRIENDS!

2019 has brought us many victories, no doubt due to efforts of not only our staff, but also donors, volunteers, and followers.

Thanks to your support, we were able to provide legal, psychological, medical and humanitarian aid to refugees and migrants from different countries.
We would like to acknowledge the work of the lawyers of the Memorial Human Rights Centre, who work closely in connection with migration consultants of the Civic Assistance Committee. Together, we won many important landmark cases in the European Court.

In 2019, we were approached by several Chechen girls who were forced to flee their homes because of abuse from their relatives. Unfortunately, young Chechnian girls not ordinarily ask for help from law enforcement agencies because those agencies typically do not want to meddle in family matters. Thankfully, we were able to help them because of our cooperation with Tatyana Moskalkova, the Commissioner for Human Rights in the Russian Federation and Tatyana Potyaeva, the Commissioner for Human Rights in Moscow.

In 2019, we organized various meetings, round table discussions, and lectures on migration issues and asylum system within Russia and world-wide. We also organized two music parties in “Rovesnik” bar, where refugees played their favorite music while people danced.

Our volunteers helped us accompany refugees to the migration authorities and courts, interpreting interviews and court hearings, translating our reports and much more.

All year round, our Integration Center in Noginsk was working with Syrian children. This summer, our lawyers and the Syrian project coordinator made sure that most of these children were admitted into school.

Unfortunately, there is much resistance with education authorities with admitting students into school even though education is one of the most important influences that a country can exert on the people living in it.

Svetlana Gannushkina,
Chairman of the Committee
The Civic Assistance Committee is a group of people who care and believe that regardless of the circumstances, all people should retain the right to live, study, work and receive medical care.

MISSION AND VALUES
We sincerely believe that the most important task of our society is to help and support those who are in a difficult situation. After all, that is the essence of humanism. Do not turn away from those who are in trouble. Do not make a difference between people on any ground. Ensure that Maxim Gorky’s famous phrase “A human being - it sounds proudly!” does not lose its meaning and relevance.

Humankind will not be saved by the latest technology or scientific advances. Humankind will be saved by humanity. And if you think and feel the same — join us!

While it is difficult to estimate the scope of support that is needed by those who approach us, here are the most important areas highlighted:

- Counseling for those applying for refugee status, temporary asylum, permanent residency, temporary residence permits, counseling on obtaining citizenship, social, medical aid, etc. Often asylum seekers are confused, disoriented and do not know who to approach, and what to do.
We represent the interests of refugees, migrant workers and the stateless in court, and help to protect their legal rights.

Humanitarian aid. Often people in distress are left with nothing; neither clothing nor hygienic items. And our task is to provide them with the essentials.

Assistance in educating refugee children and adult migrants. Unfortunately, not every child has an opportunity to attend Russian comprehensive school, and we try to ensure that all children are able to attend school. Yet there is another problem; those who started Russian school are in need of help with their studies. We are also able provide this support.

Medical and psychological aid. The vast majority of migrants do not have access to free health care. Almost all of them are also in need of psychological counseling in order to survive their traumatic situations and return to normal life.

Overcoming the negative attitude of society towards migrants. We try and raise awareness that the migrants and refugees become victims of these terrible circumstances, and it is not their faults. We should treat them with compassion and understanding.

Preparing analytical materials is an important part of our work. Russian authorities’ websites publish scarce data on the institution of asylum and refugees in the country. We strive to make public the information on deplorable and degrading situation of people who were forced to leave their homes. We analyze data on refugee status and temporary asylums granted, monitor court hearings on expulsion of foreign citizens from Russia and share judicial statistics, and prepare reports of children with access to education.
In 2019, the Committee also participated in writing a large international report about the refugees from Syria. Unfortunately, the data for Russia is upsetting: during 2018, Russian state migration service almost did not grant asylum to Syrian citizens, and those who had received it before were not allowed to renew the document. In their decisions, officials wrote that Syrian citizens generally “had no obstacles to return”. Sadly, the Russian state migration service was not interested in the fact that the situation in the country was still very dangerous, and, in 2018, the largest number of children was killed in Syria since the outbreak of the war.
Unfortunately, 2019 was not marked by significant changes with regards to refugees’ human rights. They continue to face restrictions on access to asylum, non-compliance with the procedure, and unjustified rejections of asylum.

Sadly, in 2019, a new abysmal record was set: only 23 people were recognized as refugees. Over the year, the number of people with refugee status had decreased by 85 people, and there were only 487 refugees across the vast territory of Russia now. The number of holders of temporary asylum also decreased — almost twice as compared to last year.
THE COMMITTEE’S COUNSELING OFFICE CONTINUED ITS WORK THREE DAYS A WEEK, PROVIDING COUNSELING OF REFUGEES

In 2019, the Committee’s counseling office continued its work three days a week, providing counseling of refugees by lawyers and migration consultants in five languages (Arabic, Farsi, French, English, and Russian). Work was also carried out with victims of sexual violence, as well as with unaccompanied children. In total, more than two thousand consultations were provided on the matters of applying for asylum, obtaining citizenship, residence permit, deportation, employment, etc.

I, like all people on earth, do not know what will happen to me in my future — perhaps they will deport me back to my homeland, to Yemen, where there is a war, and I will have to fight. Anything can happen, but what can I do? In Russia, there are these laws, and no one can help me with them... Despite it all, I am happy right now. I have a roof over my head, and food. This is enough. I like Moscow, and I like the people.

First difficulties I ran into were at the airport – nobody was speaking English. I could not understand how to make it to the city. Finally, a man helped me and took me to a hotel he knew. I paid 500 rubles for taxi and 2500 for a night in the hotel. I realized that soon I would run out of money, and went to the police. For some reason I thought that the authorities should know who I was and why I came to Russia. But the police just gave me the address of Civic Assistance Committee, where I met a guy from Lebanon who told me that many Africans stayed in the area by Dmitry Donskoy Boulevard metro station. I went there and saw a football field with a lot of black guys playing.

In 2019, we continued to help the stateless to obtain legal status in the Russian Federation. Most stateless people are elderly, ill or single, and some of them are even homeless. They often fail to overcome various bureaucratic hurdles on the way to receiving Russian passport without outside help. Some simply do not live long enough to obtain the passport.

Despite the fact that in terms of cooperation with authorities the year 2019 was the worst in the history of the Committee; with our help, 23 people received Russian passports, one person received a temporary residence permit, and three received a residence permit.

Our ward Konstantin Vorobyov, native of the Russian Federation. For years, he fought for a Russian passport instead of the Soviet one, but died at the age of 79 still waiting for one.
Policemen took away my Soviet passport. I was taking my daughter to school when a police car stopped me in Nakhabino. They took my passport as security and sent me to get money in order to pay a fine. Yet they never returned my document to me, only a certificate that my Soviet passport was discarded.

This is how I became a stateless person, the only one in the family. My wife is an Armenian from Baku; until 2001, she had had a supplementary document of citizenship in her Soviet passport, and then they took it away and replaced it with a new standard Russian passport. Our daughter was granted citizenship automatically like her mother. I felt ashamed that my child had a passport and her dad had no document. Sometimes in school, children were requested to bring copies of their parents’ documents. My daughter would say that her dad did not have a passport yet but would soon receive it. That was our life.

Vazgen Assiryan, Nagorny Karabakh

(The website of Civic Assistance Committee. “I felt ashamed that my child had a passport and her dad had no document.” 23.10.2019)
In 2019, we provided comprehensive assistance to 244 labor migrants. All of them faced unconcern of state bodies and gross human rights’ violation. We helped people to understand the situation, provided financial, medical and psychological aid. We also helped to advocated their interests, including applying to supervisory authorities and law enforcement agencies, holding negotiations, and providing legal support. Thus, the total number of legal and social consultations for the year was 704.

Most often, they approached us for assistance in dealing with their employer's refusal to sign a labor contract and pay salaries. Very often, there were also instances about illegal seizure of documents, and restriction of liberty, and even forced labor. We believe that any work should be paid in full - and we fight all social and moral injustices in this matter.
Certainly, the situation of migrants in Russia is rather lousy, although we could say that there are some positive changes. At least, there is understanding that Russia will not do without migration and certain areas are covered by this particular workforce. As far as I understand, Russia now raises an issue of joining the International Organization for Migration. And that would be very important, because then we enter the system of international relations and should be at their level. So far, we were present there only as observers, and now it seems that the matter is under serious discussions. Then, perhaps, we will sign the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, which requires the country and its each citizen to treat a migrant with humanity and with respect for his human dignity and, by all means, for human rights. I take it as a step forward. If we do it, we could expect improvements.

Svetlana Gannushkina, President of Civic Assistance Committee

Helping Victims of Hate Attacks is a project to support migrants who have suffered at the hands of nationalists. Very often, such crimes are hushed up in mass media and are not covered by judicial statistics since the motive of national animosity is officially acknowledged very seldomly. Concealment of hate crimes against migrants makes it impossible to trace racism. Our mission is to help the abused people to cope with the consequences of the attack, and to obtain justice.

In total, throughout 2019, the Committee provided 70 consultations to victims of nationalism. The most high-profile case among new applicants was the beating of a Tajik citizen by an employee of a Magnit supermarket. The saleswoman blamed the female migrant of “all Tajiks being thieves,” and hit her head several times with a barcode scanner. Civic Assistance Committee’s lawyer represented the victim’s interests in law enforcement bodies and in court. As a result, the employee of Magnit was found guilty under the article on beatings and fined.
Only in hospital, I realized in some time that I was paralyzed. It was a shock for me. I could not believe that. Then I talked to my doctor, and he gave 90% that I would never stand up again. I thought that was the end: my life stopped, ended.

Alexander Lee, a migrant from Uzbekistan

(The website of Civic Assistance Committee. “Only in hospital, I realized that I was paralyzed.” 16.01.2019)
Help to prisoners from the North Caucasus Republics is one of the areas of the Committee’s work we don’t often share in mass media not to harm those who approached us for help. However, the project is very active.

Most of the time, prisoners complain of ill-treatment, unreasonable punishment, religious and ethnic harassment, and the failure to provide medical care. Appeals are made not only by victims themselves, but often by their relatives.

Without our help, cases that are contrary to the law and ethical standards would be hushed up, but now instead are referred for consideration to relevant authorities.
A. told the lawyer that prison colony employees forced him to be their informant. In no uncertain terms, they tell him that if he does not inform the staff about other convicts, he will “rot” in the punishment cell. Despite the threats of ill-treatment and worsening of conditions of detention, A. refuses to cooperate. According to the prisoner, this is the main reason why he is prosecuted and punished by constant disciplinary sanctions imposed.

In 2019, we helped 45 families gain access to school education. After the Committee’s help, 35 children from Afghanistan, Angola, Syria, Congo, Russia and other countries were able to start school. The reason they were originally not admitted to the schools was because their parents could not provide registration information.

We have spent several years lodging complaints to the Department of Education because refusal for this reason is in fact illegal.

The more unfortunate situation with not having access to education is within the preschool institutions. Although Moscow’s authorities claim that they have long ago resolved the problem of shortages in kindergartens, in reality, only those who have a residence registration in Moscow have priority access to kindergartens. Those with temporary registration have to be on the waiting list. In this regard, in 2019, we have also been dealing with the problems of getting children into preschool.

We continuously support children who were admitted to school, but experience difficulties with learning. The volunteers helped 20 children to study Russian and other subjects of school curriculum at home.

We continue participating in judicial proceedings on existing lawsuits related to access to education, and started active work on two new cases.
Mohamed’s parents feared that the boy would not be admitted to school, as it often happens with refugee children. From some people, the family learned about “Right to Education” program of Civic Assistance Committee, which helps refugee children to receive education. For several months, Mohamed attended the Committee’s Centre, he started learning Russian, memorizing Russian words, had some understanding of school routine and curriculum. Also the family was assisted with collecting necessary documents and admittance to school. Thus, Mohamed received an opportunity to start regular school, he wanted to attend.

(Takie Dela, "All dreams were destroyed at once." 06.11.2019)
Integration courses for refugees and migrants are a foundation for fulfilling life in a new country. In 2019, 40 participants from 18 countries attended our classes for adults. They were learning Russian in order to be able to communicate freely, found out more about their rights, and discussed problems that each of them consistently faced.

Students were provided with all necessary material, as well as travel cards, so that they could attend classes. We arranged holidays for our students; celebrating New Years, Pancake week, and birthdays. Volunteers organized a master class in drawing, and arranged a visit to the Moscow Museum of Modern Art and Kolomenskoye Art and Architectural Museum-Reserve for introduction to the historical and cultural heritage of Russia.

In 2019, we also had integration classes for 52 children of Syrian refugees. Classes held at the Center were Russian, mathematics, Arabic, drawing, basics of geography and history for children of different ages. For refugees’ children, access to secondary school is often illegally banned, and the Integration Center of Civic Assistance Committee for many of them is the only way to receive knowledge and have a community. The Committee’s staff and volunteers also organize visits to Moscow museums, city tours and creative workshops for children.
Fifteen years ago, I followed my husband and moved to Moscow. At first I didn’t like it here; I understood nothing, because I did not know the language. I often suffered from headache, did not feel like doing much. Doctors said stress was to blame. To get out of that state, I decided to find some occupation and began to attend Russian course at the Centre of Civic Assistance Committee. As a result of learning Russian, I found an excellent job. And before that even McDonald’s would not employ me because of my poor Russian. Now I am a professional beautician.

Khalida, Afghanistan

(Moskvich Mag, “For some reason, people in Moscow think that all the Tadjiks wear orange vests.” 16.05.2019)
Often refugees and migrants do not have access to the most needed medical treatment and medicine. Thus, our task is to help them to sustain a healthy life.

The Civic Assistance Committee provides counseling by a doctor three times a week. In total, in 2019, the doctor consulted 1493 patients. Among them were citizens of Afghanistan, the DRC, Syria, Ukraine and Nigeria. All of them received help for musculoskeletal system disorders, heart diseases and gastrointestinal disorders.

Free health care in our country becomes less accessible, and although we strive to make the most of its last residues, we often have to find considerable funds for medical treatment of our clients. A significant contribution to our health care in 2019 was made by private donations - their total amount was 344,465 rubles. Thanks to this financial support, we managed to give hope to many people. For example, we were able to afford botulinotherapy for a refugee from Yemen with torticollis. Another example of our help is a woman from Afghanistan who suffered from cancer; we provided her with consultations from a radiologist and admission to hospital. We were also able to help a refugee from Syria with a dentist consultation.
Psychological assistance to refugees and migrants is the basis for a successful integration and stress coping. Often people are disoriented, scared and do not know how to live on. They are in need of support, understanding and creating new life guidelines.

In total, in 2019, 32 people from Russia, Ukraine, Georgia, Turkmenistan, Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Iran, Cameroon, Congo, Sierra Leone, Ghana and Syria asked us for psychological support, both on an ongoing basis and for one-time consultation. Psychological aid was provided not only in person, but also by telephone.

Nine applicants were referred to a psychiatrist for professional help and received treatment.
Humanitarian aid to refugees and migrants organized by the Committee is an opportunity for all those who care to show sympathy, compassion and understanding. It is not only the provision of necessary things like clothes, hygienic, and household items, it is also a gesture of solidarity, which is so important for people in distress in order to build their self-confidence and be of value to somebody.

In 2019, the Committee accepted things like toys, food products, and hygiene items as donations from everyone. It also worked in cooperation with the Health and Life Charitable Foundation, which allocated funds for purchase of winter clothes for children of Syrian refugees.
Partnership is possible though participation in the Committee’s activities of all companies, foundations and organizations that share our values and ideas. It is their support that for many years in a row allowed us not to give up and be constantly aware of how great and important the work we do, no matter how hard it is. We do it together, and it inspires strong belief in success.

PRIVATE DONATIONS

Private donations are an important part of our society. And we are pleased to see that more and more people are eager to help. Thanks to private donations, the most diverse areas of our activities are implemented: fund raising for expensive operations, purchasing medicine, transport cards, food, school supplies and other items that our clients are deprived of. Private donations are an integral reinforcement of our work that strengthens the belief that we do the right thing.
The first step in solving any problem is to make it known. In 2019, references to the Committee in the media reached several thousand. Materials on human rights, refugees’ and migrants’ issues, stories of our applicants and comments of Committee’s experts were published in mass media and online publications and prepared for radio and TV.

In social networks FB, Instagram and Vkontakte we regularly posted information about the organization’s work, shared refugees’ stories and announced Committee’s events.
OUR VOLUNTEERS

OUR VOLUNTEERS ARE AN AMAZING ADDITION TO THE COMMITTEE. THESE PEOPLE SACRIFICE THEIR PERSONAL TIME TO SERVE THOSE WHO NEED HELP AND SUPPORT.

14-year-old artist Ferdavs (in the centre), volunteers and employees of the Committee, who helped the teenager from a refugee family to host his own personal exhibition.
In 2019, volunteers continued to help migrants and refugees in all possible areas, from accompanying them to various authorities, to translating documents. They conducted Russian lessons, helped with homework and played with children, and helped adults with paperwork and household issues. They stayed in contact, offering moral and psychological support, trying to debunk the ideas of people in distress that the world was hostile towards them. It seems that often the main thing a person needs is another person.

For example, while helping 14-year-old refugee from Afghanistan Ferdavs, our volunteer Lera noticed his talent of an artist. She told us about this and offered to organize a display of Ferdavs' works. And we have done it together!

Another volunteer Nastya made an unforgettable birthday for Samir, who she taught Russian. Together with her mother, she prepared a dozen dishes of Russian cuisine for the boy's lunch, and Nastya invented a special guessing game for him and a trip to the movie at the end of the day.

The volunteers from the Committee often meet together in their free time to exchange ideas, hang out and swap ideas, or cook something tasty together.

This Russian meal was a present for the birthday of one of the refugees Samira from Afghanistan, and it was made by our volunteer Nastya.
All our events could be conditionally divided into educational, intercultural and integration ones. We give lectures at universities, host discussion panels, and hold Library of Lives where refugees talk about their life. We organize press conferences, as well as children's parties. In 2019, we tried a new format and invited refugees to act as DJs at a youth party in “Rovesnik” bar.

In 2019, we focused more on events for volunteers, including hosting master classes, trainings, and introductory meetings for them.
HOW TO HELP

On April 20, 2015 Ministry of Justice put Civic Assistance Committee on the list of organizations “acting as a foreign agent”.
