Strong. Caring. Good Listener. Leader. Resilient. Athletic. Helpful. Unsuspecting. Silly. Positive. Creative. Smart. Resourceful. Encouraging.

These are the frequent words that have been used to describe me both professionally and personally. As a survivor of childhood trauma and the loss of several loved ones, including my mother, I believe these characteristics are what qualifies me as a solid and effective therapist with my clients whom themselves identify as possessing many of the same traits.
