

2022 PROJECT FACTSHEET

Context of intervention and history of Samusocial Perú

Samusocial Peru was created in 2004 to fight social exclusion by promoting the right to health and a life without violence, providing comprehensive care that ranges from emergency to restitution of rights through networking. We direct our action mainly to children, adolescents, and women in vulnerable situations or affected by family violence.

Our proposal is to build a bridge between the community and public services to strengthen, support, and improve the functioning of the care system, making it more inclusive.

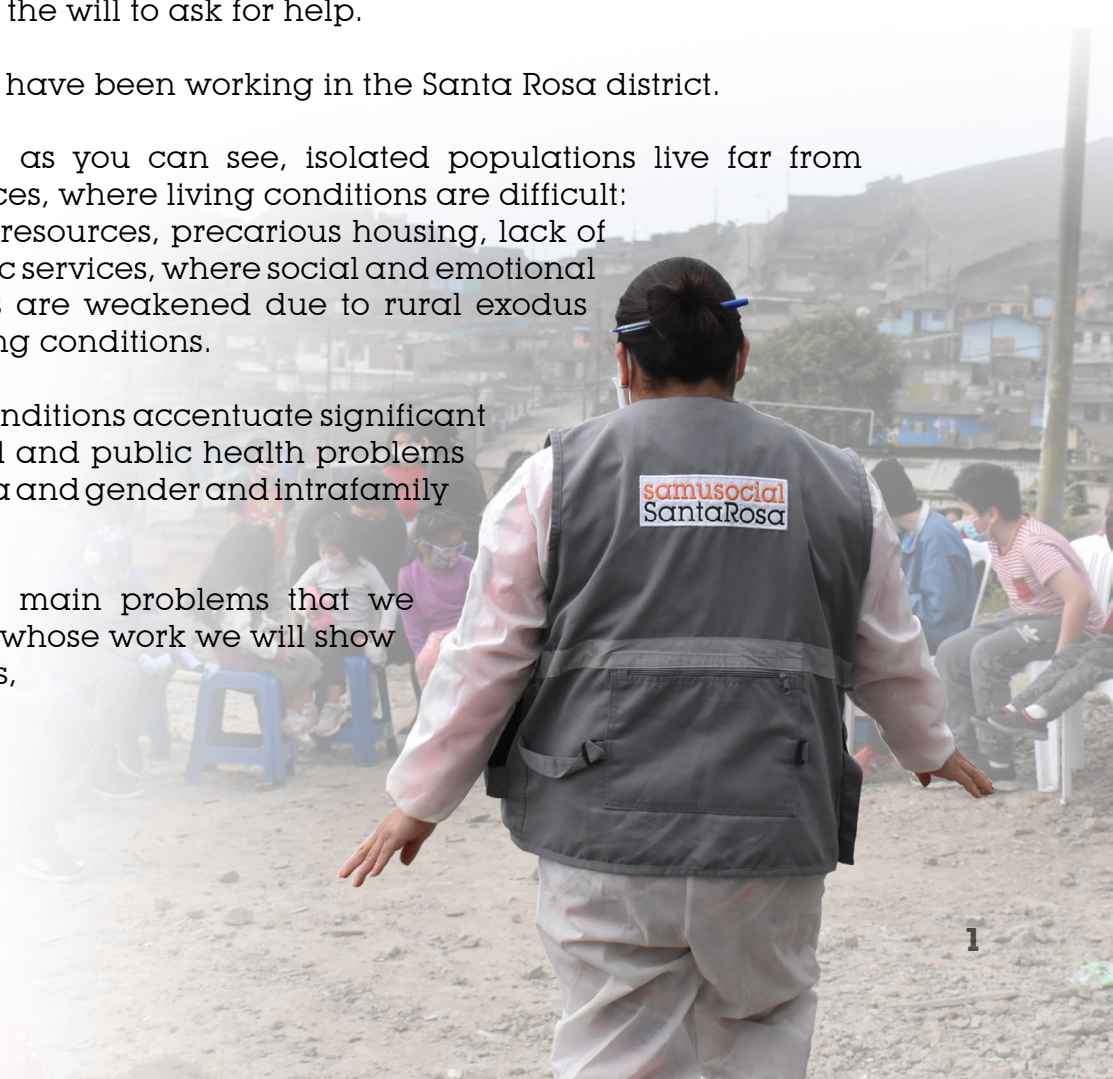

The Samusocial method is a social emergency method based on going to meet people in a situation of exclusion who no longer have the strength or the will to ask for help.

Since 2013, we have been working in the Santa Rosa district.

In this district, as you can see, isolated populations live far from essential services, where living conditions are difficult: low economic resources, precarious housing, lack of access to public services, where social and emotional ties of families are weakened due to rural exodus and harsh living conditions.

These living conditions accentuate significant national social and public health problems such as anemia and gender and intrafamily violence.

These are the main problems that we deal with and whose work we will show on these pages,

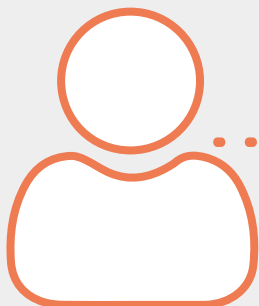

Beneficiaries of Samusocial Perú

The beneficiaries of Samusocial Peru are families in precarious living conditions, most of whom live in the highlands of the Santa Rosa district. These families face many gaps and needs:

Boys, girls, pregnant women, postpartum women, and infants with a degree of anemia. In North Lima, Santa Rosa is the district with the highest proportion of children with anemia (49%).

Families affected by gender violence and domestic violence. At the national level, 54.8% of women are victims of violence, affecting 80% of children and adolescents.

Populations with little or no access to basic medical and psychosocial services and with limited knowledge of their social rights.

Mobile Teams

1248 beneficiaries of home visits and telephone follow-up.

1497 beneficiaries of two health campaigns.

The Mobile Teams carry out rounds or home visits to reach the population, provide them with medical and psychosocial care, and refer them to the corresponding public institutions. In addition, they regularly organize health campaigns in the community in which medical assistance from different specialties is provided to the isolated population.

Attention module

94 medical-psychosocial care for 73 beneficiaries.

It provides a safe space for all the vulnerable people who receive personalized support, especially women who have suffered violence.

Case referrals and accompaniment

45 referrals are made to different public organizations.

Samusocial Peru serves as a bridge between the community and public services to strengthen, support, and improve the functioning of the care system, making it more inclusive.

Awareness activities

1391 beneficiaries in 22 social campaigns.

1823 people reached in 120 awareness activities.

Through talks, workshops, or campaigns, community members inform them about their rights and the care they must have to take care of their health. In addition, they are provided with information on the steps they must take to access the different services offered by the State. Samusocial Peru also advocates before the authorities and sensitizes the population on the issue of exclusion.

Support to partner organizations

19 participation in the concertation boards.

We achieved collaborative synergies thanks to involvement in concertation boards and local articulation instances, enabling collaborative work.

Partners

Samusocial Peru has an agreement with the Directorate of Integrated Health Networks of North Lima (DIRIS LN) of the Ministry of Health. Samusocial Peru also has an agreement with the Ministry of Women, with its National Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Violence against Women and Members of the Family Group. These agreements contemplate a collaborative work that allows mutual referrals for follow-up cases, transfers with the Mobile Help Team, and staffing for home visits, comprehensive health campaigns, and awareness activities.

In addition, we have a strong alliance with the Municipality of Santa Rosa. Finally, we have initiated contacts with the Metropolitan Municipality of Lima to establish a collaboration agreement.

↑ About SSI

samusocialInternational

Samusocial International was created in 1998 by Dr. Xavier Emmanuelli to help people in highly vulnerable situations around the world. The Samusocial International Network has 17 devices in Africa, Europe and Latin America.

The "Samusocial" devices apply a specific method of multidisciplinary intervention that consists of "going towards" people in situations of extreme exclusion and offering them medical and psychosocial support.
