The heavy rain brought extra damages to the area*

It will soon be two years since the earthquake.

Japan Platform (JPF) began providing emergency assistance and local needs assessments from the day the Noto Peninsula earthquake occurred in January 2024. In addition to providing rapid rescue and medical assistance, as well as food and sanitation support, we also provided assistance such as livelihood reconstruction and mental health care in areas where infrastructure had been severely damaged.

In September 2024, just as signs of recovery and reconstruction were beginning to appear, the area was hit by devastating heavy rains. JPF expanded its assistance plans and utilized its local networks to respond swiftly to ensure that no one was left behind.

In cooperation with Ishikawa Prefecture, we delivered daily necessities to people living in temporary housing in evacuation sites in all cities, towns, and villages in the prefecture.

Since March 2025, we have been providing support to people living in temporary housing, mental health care, and livelihood reconstruction support.

Thanks to your support, JPF has been able to continue its relief activities. Our activities will continue in the future, but our donation window will close at the end of year 2025. We would like to express our sincere gratitude for your support so far.

●PARCIC, a JPF member NGO, dispatched two staff members to Ishikawa Prefecture on January 6th,2024 and began its support by providing supplies to Suzu City.

PARCIC has rented part of 'Noto Nanami Health and Welfare Village Nagomi' in Noto Town, which had suspended operations due to the disaster, and is operating it as a temporary exchange hub where people from beyond the local area can gather. Centered around this hub, PARCIC continues to support disaster-affected residents of Noto Town and conducts activities aimed at parents and children.

Large-scale repairs were required to turn the damaged facility into a community hub, and work to restore the previously cut-off high-voltage electricity and install a temporary septic tank took a particularly long time. It took about six months from the time we first toured the facility until we had a clear outlook for when it would be operational again, and finally, in February 2025, Nagomi was able to reopen as a place of relaxation and welcome people again.

Even after reopening, maintenance such as installing air conditioning was required, but a comfortable environment has gradually been created and the area is once again bustling with activity.

“Cafe Nagomi”is open five days a week and has a reputation for its delicious lunch, making it a popular place for locals to drop in casually.

●No One Left Behind: Noto's Ongoing Support and Future Challenges for Recovery

The major initiative that Peace Winds Japan (PWJ) has been implementing in Suzu City is to support the health maintenance of disaster victims.

PWJ is providing daily support to the community by holding health counseling sessions at meeting places of temporary housing and community centers in cooperation with the “Sasaeai” (means mutual support in Japanese) Center and the Suzu City General Hospital, and Peace Winds Japan nurses are provide health counseling through individual visits.

PWJ is also promoting initiatives aimed at rebuilding communities. By providing opportunities for residents to gather, discuss, and learn from each other, such as tea ceremonies at community halls and community centers, exchange meetings with student volunteers, and information sessions on housing reconstruction, we are helping people living in the community to regain connections and take steps toward rebuilding their lives.

● Community Support Continues at Machino-no-ma in Machino-cho, Wajima City

PBV is currently operating Machinoma, an exchange center for local residents in Machino-cho, Wajima City.

One user said, "I feel lonely when I am alone in temporary housing, but when I come here, I am glad to see everyone.

The staff members were full of natural smiles, and a warm atmosphere that supports the revitalization of the community pervaded the entire center. We were reminded of the importance of having such a "place where people can meet and share their feelings.

PBV and JPF will continue to support the community while carefully listening to its changing needs.

Collaboration with Private Sector

● On December 6, 2025, as part of "The Heart of LifeWear," an event was held through Japan Platform (JPF) to deliver HEATTECH clothing to victims of the Noto Peninsula earthquake and heavy rains. This year, UNIQLO hosted the event to deliver HEATTECH clothing to victims of the Noto Peninsula earthquake and heavy rains.

The event was attended by people who had evacuated to Nomi City, Ishikawa Prefecture, thanks to the efforts of Second Harvest Japan (2HJ), a member NGO active as part of JPF's "Noto Peninsula Disaster Relief (Earthquake and Heavy Rains)" program, and a local children's cafeteria. A sumo wrestler from Ishikawa Prefecture appeared to represent the Japan Sumo Association, and there was a big applause & smiles from the people.
