20 Poor Families in Indonesia.

Here are some of their life stories...

Name (Age):

Miah (49)

Occupation:

Housewife, collecting firewood

Miah goes into the woods daily with her 3.5-year-old toddler, to gain firewood.

She carried around 30 kilograms of firewood on her head and walked a mile each round. She can go three to four rounds each day.

Miah then has to dry the firewood for 10 to 15 days, and then use it to fuel her household. "Gas and electricity expenses are too expensive for us. Thus we get by with using firewood to cook, heat water, and other thing" said Miah.

Name (Age):

Uun (60)

Occupation:

Seasonal
Farm Worker

Despite her old age, Uun still works daily from morning until noon. Her husband died two years ago, making her living and catering all her needs all alone.

Name (Age):

Komariah (45)

Occupation:

Seasonal Farm Worker

Komariah's husband died a year ago. Thus, she has to do more work to provide for her family.

Komariah only gets about 1 to 2 dollars a day for her work. This has made her economic condition harder.

Een lives alone, although her house is near her three children's home.

She still goes to her small farm every day. She planted cassava, to be sold each time she needed some money.

"I couldn't do anything much nowadays. Mostly I tinker around the house every day" said Een.

Name (Age):

Een (79)

Occupation:

None

Name (Age):

Enung (70)

Occupation:

Seasonal Farm Worker

Enung doesn't have a steady income, it is not every day she's called to work at the farm.

When she does, she must walk for two hours with a walker.

Her work continues at home because she is the single caretaker of her elderly and ill mother.

Name (Age):

Ai Rohimah (43)

Occupation:

Owning a small shop at home

Ai Rohimah became a single parent a month ago. Her husband died.

This condition made her the only breadwinner for her family. She is now taking care of her child and her immobile mother due to an illness.

Name (Age):

Kokom (32)

Occupation:

Seasonal
Farm Worker

Kokom can earn 2-3 dollars a day, if a land owner asks her to work. If not, then she will have nothing for the day.

She has two children, and one of them is with a disability (deaf). This made her life more challenging, but she is determined to keep on doing her best every day.
