

SPERANȚA TERREI

MOLDOVA

Speranța Terrei is a Moldovan grassroots organization active in tuberculosis practice and policy since 2006. Its principal purposes are to give treatment adherence support to tuberculosis (TB) patients and to promote their socioeconomic integration. Located in Bălți, Speranța Terrei has managed community-based Directly Observed Therapy (DOT) programs in Bălți municipality and 7 districts in Moldova and Transnistria. Speranța Terrei was honored twice with international prizes. The first was the inaugural Tuberculosis Survival Prize in 2008 in recognition of innovative advocacy and social mobilization; and the second was the Kochon Prize in 2016 to our long-time treatment supporter, Galina, for her contributions to TB elimination.

Speranța Terrei engages patients, their families, medical practitioners, government officials, and citizens in TB control and advocates for their shared responsibility in treatment adherence, consistent with international standards. Treatment supporters, called moderators, give DOT to patients wherever they live, be it a run-down apartment, a remote village, or the street. In cooperation with doctors and nurses, moderators take anti-TB drugs from the dispensary to patients and report back on patients' concerns on drug regimens and side effects. Moderators are from the community and develop patients' trust over months of unhurried interactions. Our moderators have given treatment support to 1303 patients who had new and previously treated drug-susceptible and multi-drug resistant (MDR-TB) tuberculosis or who were contacts of TB patients requiring prophylaxis treatment. Patients we serve have an overall treatment success rate of 87 per cent.

Tuberculosis is associated with poverty and every day we see those on the margins of society. Moderators encounter patients who suffer from alcohol and tobacco addiction, homelessness, insufficient nutrition, unsanitary living conditions, and stigma as former prisoners. With TB as an entry point, we connect patients to psychological and legal counseling, job training, and temporary housing. We have undertaken special projects for former prisoners and the homeless to screen and treat them for TB. In 2015, Speranța Terrei opened a Centre for Tuberculosis Patients in Bălți where we train moderators, counsel patients and help them apply for social assistance and residency permits, serve meals to the homeless, and bring together patients and the larger community.

Speranța Terrei has received funds from the German government's Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ), Global Giving Foundation, Lilly MDR-TB Partnership, Embassy of Norway, King Williams College, Act for Involvement (formerly Caritas Luxembourg), Centre PAS, Soros Foundation Moldova, World Health Organization, and Moldovan and overseas companies and individuals.
