I. PROJECT STATUS.

During the current reporting period, the Center for Promotion and Human Solidarity, Inc. (CEPROSH) wishes to transparently report that, although this project remains active, implementation of the proposed activities has not yet begun. Recently, the project received a donation of USD$150.96; however, these funds have not yet been deposited into our institutional account. In any case, this amount is not sufficient to begin project implementation.

The project aims to strengthen the safety, health, and protection of children and adolescents in Puerto Plata through education, gender-based violence prevention, psychological support, and community participation. It also seeks to empower young people with knowledge of human rights and sexual and reproductive health, while promoting support networks and coordination with local authorities.

CEPROSH continues to strengthen the project's foundation through the following actions: promoting the project and increasing its visibility to attract potential donors and partners, and enhancing its technical planning to ensure that it is fully prepared for implementation once sufficient funding becomes available.

The conditions that gave rise to this initiative remain unchanged. Children and adolescents in Puerto Plata continue to face limited access to reliable information, increasing their vulnerability to early pregnancies, sexually transmitted infections, and unsafe environments. In addition, gender-based violence and the lack of psychological support continue to pose significant challenges.

Although the lack of adequate funding has prevented the project's implementation, its need and relevance remain unchanged. CEPROSH reaffirms its commitment to continuing to pursue funding opportunities and strategic partnerships that will make this initiative possible.

We appreciate the opportunity to keep this project visible and reaffirm our commitment to working toward a positive impact on the lives of children and adolescents in Puerto Plata.
