

Resolving Wildlife Conflicts in the West

The National Wildlife Federation's work conserving public lands in the West provides species such as grizzly bears, bighorn sheep, and bison room to expand their habitat and secure their recovery.

Conserving large landscapes takes time, money, and good partnerships. The National Wildlife Federation has been a leader in developing win-win collaborative solutions that benefit wildlife and ranchers in the West. Over the past 20 years, The National Wildlife Federation has resolved wildlife/ livestock conflicts on over 1.5 million acres of public lands.

For more info, visit us at
nwf.org/WCR