Global Education Campaign Overview

Global Education Campaign provides high-quality education with humanitarian values to people who, due to economic depression and political oppression, have no other means of becoming educated. GEC teaches both boys and girls and does not discriminate based on social, religious, or racial background.

Founded in 1994 and designated as a 501(c)(3) organization, GEC (formerly named Dosti Foundation) establishes schools for children, as well as skill development centers for young women, in economically and politically oppressed areas in developing countries. Focusing especially on the great city of Peshawar in northwestern Pakistan, which is the birthplace of our founders, GEC has also operated in Chitral, Pakistan, and was instrumental in starting a school in the Republic of Congo in Africa, which is now self-supporting.

Global Education Campaign strives to eliminate child labor, bondage, and abuse by breaking cycles of family poverty. We believe that all children deserve a nurturing environment with clean air and water; good nutrition that facilitates normal physical growth; and educational opportunities that allow them to realize their potential and become productive citizens.

Because the curriculum of Global Education Campaign schools conforms to local governments' regulations, a graduate of one of our schools can easily be admitted to other schools or colleges.

The devastating Indus Valley flooding of 2010 will be felt for years to come.

When funds are available, we also provide basic health care and humanitarian aid and assist people in the face of natural disasters. Your support can keep these projects going!

The Global Education Campaign is registered as a 501(c)(3) charity under the United States Internal Revenue Code, so your donation is tax-deductible to the extent permitted by law.
