

Improve Child Nutrition in Rural Peru AGAPE HAND AND REFOREST TREES

Feed the Children Program

Project Overview

Thousands of children in rural Peru experience food insecurity and inadequate access to nutritious food. Through AGAPE HAND's Feed the Children program, this project improves child nutrition by providing nutritious food, community-based nutrition support, and partnerships that strengthen food access for vulnerable families.

Why This Project Matters

Persistent poverty, geographic isolation, and limited access to nutritious foods contribute to chronic malnutrition and poor child development in many rural communities. The project promotes sustainable, community-centered responses that improve health and educational opportunities.

Project Objectives

- Improve child nutrition
- Reduce food insecurity
- Support healthy child growth

- Strengthen community nutrition
- Promote long-term wellbeing

How Donations Create Impact

$10: Nutritious meals for one child

$25: Nutrition support

$50: Food assistance

$100: Community nutrition activities

$250: Family food support

$500: Community nutrition expansion

$1,000: Strengthen local partnerships

$2,500: Sustain comprehensive nutrition initiatives

Expected Outcomes

Improved nutrition, healthier growth, stronger families, resilient communities, and better educational opportunities for children.

Sustainability

The project works with food donors, volunteers, local partners, and community leaders to strengthen local capacity and sustain nutrition support.

About AGAPE HAND

AGAPE HAND AND REFOREST TREES works with rural and Indigenous communities in Peru to improve food security, child wellbeing, education, environmental restoration, and community resilience.

Contact

<https://agapehands.org/feed-the-children/>