According to the Haiku Society of America, a haiku is "a short poem that uses imagistic language to convey an experience."

Every year, DC's Golden Triangle Business Improvement District hosts a "Golden Haiku" competition in the early spring.

Winners and honorable mentions of the contest are featured in tree boxes that line some of DC's busiest streets, as you see depicted on the postcard. These signs are eye-catching, colorful, and fun, contributing to a brighter day for thousands who travel along the haiku lined routes!

This year's Golden Haiku theme is "Spring in the City." What would your Haiku say to help us imagine spring in your favorite city?
